have read over proposed plan and have these concerns: 'best available science' is not clearly defined, nor are steps to determining what evidence is best or if one has addressed all available science. this weakens the intent of the directive by allowing a responsible official to use poorly constructed studies or subjective observation as basis of decision making. surely we can write better guidelines to address this.

also, responsible officials are receiving significant discretionary rights in the proposed changes. I advise that accountability to regional officials should be maintained by such discretionary decisions being submitted for approval at that level. this helps reduce abuse of discretion and potential for corruption by local industry or business interests.

finally, recreational uses should be defined to exclude uses that destroy habitat, create noise and air pollution, and other problems contrary to the rest of the plan. as stated, all atvs, 4x4s, and other potentially destructive uses might be allowed by the (ir)responsible official.
