there needs to be a level headed approach towards this forest plan on all sides. Back country snowmobilers do have a place weather the enviros. like it or not, the closing of certain popular back country snowmobile area's has destroyed certain towns winter time economy. The county commissioners need to have a say in the forest plan too, and so should the businesses that are effected by land closures. Wilderness needs a different name ...and should allow snowmobile use in certain area's of a proposed wilderness area. national protection area, or recreation area. where as managed as wilderness in the summertime and then allows snowmobile use in the winter time in certain area's. Back country snowmobile use shouldn't be lumped in with atv's or motorbikes. The new planning rule needs to be flexible and work with the people in the small communities, instead of against them, the rule should let local forest service make the rules instead of the people back in Washinton D.C. it should be the locals and local government that have the final say. Did i read your new planning rule .....no...its like trying to find a needle in a hay stack...but I'm sure it has a lot of bullshit in it... thank you mike gulette
